Italo Navy Units Sink Anglo Ships

British Battleship Is Hit, Two Subs and Two Freighters Are Sunk
Gayda Speaks
Editorial Writer Says Churchill-U. S. Seek World Power

Rome, Jan. 10 (AP)—Italian planes and naval units, striking hard in the war at sea, hit a British battleship with air bombs, sank two submarines and two freighters and torpedoed two other merchantmen, the high command said today.

In addition, the high command reported, Fascist warships "effectively bombed enemy coastal position" in the Greek campaign.

The British battleship was not identified but the daily war bulletin said it was hit despite "violent anti-aircraft reaction" during an attack on a large naval formation in the eastern Mediterranean.

One of the two submarines sunk by torpedo boats was the 1,400-ton French Narval, the communiqué said, identifying her as a vessel "incorporated in forces serving England."

("Free French" headquarters in London announced the loss of the Narval by "enemy action" yesterday. She was identified as the first unit of the French navy to join the "Free French" forces on the side of Britain.)

Merchantmen Torpedoed
Two merchant ships in convoy were reported torpedoed by an Italian submarine in the Mediterranean, while other submarines were said to have sunk the 2,883-ton Greek steamer Anastassia and the armed British steamer Shakespear in the Atlantic.

Two Italian planes "failed to return" from the attack in which the British battleship was hit, the high command said, and one British plane was shot down.

(Twenty-three survivors from the 5,029-ton Shakespear landed at the Cape Verde Island of Sal Wednesday and reported that several crew members were killed in the explosion of the submarine torpedo which sent the vessel to the bottom. Nineteen crew members were missing.)

The high command reported that Italian planes had bombed and machine-gunned the British air and naval base at Malta, hitting five planes and an anti-aircraft battery on the ground and two steamers.

(A Valletta dispatch last night said British fighters shot down four of a dozen Italian planes attacking Malta while anti-aircraft fire accounted for a fifth. Slight damage and no casualties resulted from the Italian attack, the British announced.)

British planes were reported to have dropped incendiary bombs on Messina, in Sicily, but the high command said resulting fires were "immediately put under control."

Mayor Conference Hits Differentials In State Program

Objection First Organized Voice Against Lehman Defense Proposals; Fight Expected

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—Payment of civil and army pay differentials to government employees in military service, one of Governor Lehman's defense proposals, drew fire today as "grossly discriminating" between public and private employees.

First organized opposition to any phase of the "total defense" plan urged by the governor in his annual message to the Legislature came from the State Conference of Mayors, which submitted a 25-point program.

It opposed extension of "full pay" protection to state and municipal workers conscripted for military training and urged repeal of a law which provides it for employees on active duty with the National Guard, naval militia or naval reserve.

Governor Lehman recommended a salary differential for drafted government workers and added: "I am very hopeful that private employers will seek, where circumstances permit, to supplement the army pay of their employees inducted into military service."

Fight Is Anticipated
Predictions the subject would be among the "most controversial" of the Democratic governor's proposals already have come from Republican legislators.

The Mayors' Conference asserted private employees "do not receive any difference in pay or any vacations when they are inducted into the federal service" and added: "There is no valid reason why government employees, whose salaries are in part paid by these taxpayers, should receive any difference in pay."

A constitutional amendment which, proposed by the governor last year, would permit use of the state's grade crossing elimination funds for highway construction (Continued on Page 14)

British May Begin Drive Upon Italy

Campaign Might Be Waged to Checkmate German Invasion of England Retaliation Due
Thailand Will Attack Big Cities in French Indo-China

London, Jan. 10 (AP)—A British offensive against Italy to checkmate Germany's long-threatened invasion of England is being spoken of as a possibility by military circles here as the result of recent developments in the Mediterranean.

Victories by the army of the Nile, as well as by Greek forces in Albania, have brought widespread speculation that the end of Italian resistance in North Africa may be near.

Once the North African campaign is cleaned up, some observers believe, the Royal Navy and Air force may open widespread attacks on Italian ports and military centers in an all-out attempt to bring Italy to the point of surrender or revolution.

Behind the navy and air force would be Britain's army of the middle east, ready for an invasion of Italy either across the Mediterranean or the Adriatic.

So long as fighting on the eastern front remains localized in North Africa and Albania, the Germans can afford to discount Italian reverses as having no real bearing on the outcome of the war, military analysts point out.

Should Italy be threatened by invasion, however, Germany would find it necessary to strengthen her ally by diverting not only planes but troops to Italy, they said.

A beaten Italy, it was added, means British bombers operating from Italian airfields and British troops in the Brenner Pass.

The military advantages which Britain would derive from knocking Italy out of the war would be equalled by political gains, these observers contend, strengthening British prestige in the Balkans and giving new spirit to nations now under German domination.

Retaliation Raids To Be Staged
Bangkok, Thailand, Jan. 10 (AP)—The supreme command of Thailand (Siam) announced today its decision to carry out day and night bombing raids on Saigon, Dalat and Pononpen, large cities in French Indo-China, in retaliation for reported French attempts to bomb Bangkok, Ubon and Prachinburi in Thailand last night.

A communiqué said three French planes which attempted to raid the Thai cities were repulsed before reaching their destinations.

The supreme command also announced that Thai land forces continued their advance, seizing several enemy positions.

The French, the communiqué said, retreated without offering serious resistance anywhere, leaving behind the bodies of French Moroccan troops and large quantities of arms and equipment.

Thai planes bombed Batambong and the railway town of Siemreap in the vicinity of the famous "lost civilization" ruins at Angkor, the supreme command said.

Five-Day War in Holland Did 500 Million Damage
Reports in Diplomatic Quarters Show Effect of Blitzkrieg in Netherlands

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—An estimated $500,000,000 worth of damage was done to Dutch property in the five-day German blitzkrieg which conquered the Netherlands last May, according to information only now received in diplomatic circles here.

The details of destruction, while apparently authoritative, were unofficial in character. The United States has not been represented in the Netherlands since shortly after German occupation of the country, and no American correspondents are now stationed there.

There has been, as a result, very little factual information on conditions in Holland under Nazi occupation.

Seemingly complete reports which have now reached diplomatic quarters here give this picture of the havoc wrought: A single city—Rotterdam—suffered half of the damage when it was blasted by a furious German air raid the day the nation surrendered.

In Rotterdam, where the German planes dropped hundreds of explosive and incendiary bombs from a low height, an estimated 11,000 business premises and 26,000 residences were reported destroyed or burned. Approximately 45,000 people were left homeless with a loss of all furniture and possessions.

As an example of the losses suffered by Dutch business firms the survey said that an estimated 37,000 typewriters were destroyed in Rotterdam alone.

Some aspects of life in the Netherlands under their Nazi conquerors given by the same report included: Just before cold weather set in a regulation was issued enabling each family to get an overcoat against a ration coupon.

No parades or processions of more than 100 persons are allowed except by special permit.

A decree prohibits the slaughtering of sheep without a special permit.

No persons wholly or partly Jewish may be members of school board, teach or serve as janitors.

Holland's largest motion picture theatre chain, which was Jewish owned, was turned over to an "Aryan" German firm, and no Jews are now permitted to go to the movies.

Three radio broadcasting stations, all under German domination, provide daily radio entertainment and propaganda.

Automobile traffic is practically nil.

The union claims 213 of the plant's 240 employees. It is demanding a five-cents-an-hour pay increase for all employees, an increase in the starting wage from 50 to 55 cents an hour, an increase to 65 cents after 90 days and a complete reclassification of all employees.

The plant offered to pay inexperienced men 50 cents to start, 55 cents within a year, according to Duncan Cox, general manager of the plant and vice-president of the parent corporation.

F.D.R. Says Authority Is Needed

'Repair' Clause Is Taken as Meaning British Equipment Could Be Handled Here Holds No Waiver
Barkley Says Measure Contains No Waiver of Labor Laws

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—After President Roosevelt urged quick action on his vast lease-lend program, administration leaders asked congress today to give him sweeping powers to transfer American-made military equipment to Great Britain and other warring "democracies."

The President told his press conference just before the legislation was introduced in both houses of congress that the powers which it gave him were needed to avoid delay.

The bill would permit the Chief Executive, "when he deems it in the interest of national defense," to:

"Manufacture in arsenals, factories, and shipyards under their jurisdiction, or otherwise procure, any defense article for the government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States."

"Sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend, or otherwise dispose of, to any such government any defense article."

Test, Inspect, Repair
"Test, inspect, prove, repair, outfit, recondition, or otherwise to place in good working order any defense article for any such government."

"Communicate to any such government any defense information, pertaining to any defense article furnished to such government under Paragraph (2) of this subsection."

"Release for export any defense article to any such government."

A statement issued by congressional leaders said that the bill's provision permitting the President "to test, repair, outfit, or otherwise to place in good working order any defense article" meant that repairs could be made to defense articles whether manufactured in the United States or not.

Could Repair Cruiser
"It could conceivably mean, for example," the statement said, "that the British battle cruiser Renown could be repaired in the Brooklyn navy yard if the President considered it in the interest of our national defense to do so."

"The provision is broad enough to permit the use of any of our military, naval, or air bases to outfit and repair the weapons of countries whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States."

The measure authorizes the appropriation of funds "in such amounts as may be necessary" to carry out its provisions. Estimates of eventual cost have reached $10,000,000, and Senator Barkley (D., Ky.), the majority leader, has estimated that from $2,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 may be appropriated this year.

As to the section permitting the communication of "defense information," Barkley declared that it gave the President discretionary authority "to make available designs, blueprints and other information for using particular equipment."

Only to Defense
Such information, he said, would relate only to defense articles actually supplied to foreign nations under the bill.

The government, Barkley explained, would order for foreign governments "only those materials which our army and navy could use."

"This means that we shall be producing the same material for our friends as for ourselves," he said.

"It should eliminate double assembly lines in our factories, and should help to standardize our war materials among the democracies."

Barkley said the measure contained no waiver of the wage-hour law, the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act or the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Mr. Roosevelt, besides discussing the aid-to-Britain legislation, announced that he had signed a

Churchill's Prediction Against Italy's Empire in Africa Might Work Out

Feeling Persists Among Londoners That Drive May Begin to Drive Duce Out of War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The war citadels of Signor Mussolini's Great African Empire, of which he has been inordinately proud, are beginning to shake from the disaster which has overtaken his army of conquest in the Libyan desert.

While it would be rash to draw sweeping conclusions from the allies' successes thus far, it is justifiable to say that their progress does in fact threaten the existence of Italy's whole African structure. That means Libya, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Italian Somaliland, and British Somaliland which the Fascists captured last August when the British advisedly offered little resistance.

The rapidly multiplying signs bring vividly to mind a graphic passage in British Premier Churchill's recent appeal to the Italian people to throw Il Duce overboard. In citing the wages of continuing the conflict he said:

"Our armies are tearing and will tear your African empire to shreds and tatters."

The danger undoubtedly exists that Churchill's dire prediction may be fulfilled. Because of this, and the striking Greco-British victories over the Fascists in Albania, London is beginning to buzz with talk of an offensive against Italy itself, with the idea of knocking Mussolini out of the war completely. Such an operation also would tend to checkmate Hitler's threatened invasion of Britain.

Recognition of these facts would account in part for the German activity in the Balkans. If the allied menace to Italy continues to increase, Hitler undoubtedly will attempt to counter it in some manner.

Progress Continues

Allied progress continued in both Mediterranean theatres today. From Greece comes the official announcement that the Greco-British forces have captured the important Fascist stronghold of Klisura in central Albania. That further increases the threat to the strategic port of Valona toward which the Greeks have been driving persistently for weeks. The fall of Valona would clear the Fascists out of southern Albania.

In Africa, along with the rapid advance of the allied forces into Libyan territory, comes the striking word that the native rebellion in the mountain fastnesses of wild Ethiopia is swelling. This revolt has been brewing ever since Mussolini in 1935 defied world opinion and by overwhelming force beat into submission one of the most fiercely independent peoples on earth.

The Ethiopian upheaval may easily produce a major catastrophe if it gets going full blast. Tragedy looks down from the rugged mountains onto the Italian cantonments and the many thousands of colonists whom Mussolini has sent into that primitive country. The Ethiopians are likely to exact terrible vengeance.

Revolts Increasing

Savage revolts against the Italians have been increasing, especially in the southern part of the country. Yesterday the British reported that a rebellion in western Ethiopia had forced Fascists forces to flee from one outpost.

These revolts have been set in motion by word of the British success in Libya. They aren't by any means spontaneous, however, for information from British sources says that plans for them have been carefully laid.

Little Emperor Haile Selassie reportedly is in the Egyptian Sudan himself, leading his people in the effort to regain the throne of the Lion of Judah. The British are giving him material and military aid. Many former chieftains, encouraged by the British, have been organizing companies of fighting men. Hundreds of guerrilla bands are said to be operating throughout the countryside, making sudden descents on Italian outposts or convoys.

In many places the Italians are fearful of moving without a heavy armed escort. Colonists must work their farms with rifles at hand, like our American forefathers in Indian days.

Should Ethiopia fall, along with Libya, then the Italian possessions clinging to these big territories might be expected to succumb quickly.

Townsend Club Installs New Officers for Year

The meeting of Kingston Townsend Club No. 1 this week was a memorable occasion. Fredrick G. Brooks of Schenectady, national representative of the movement, installed the newly elected officers. He was accompanied by Mrs. Brooks.

The new president, Mrs. Mildred F. Niles, outlined some plans for the year's work.

The occasion was celebrated for the birthday of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, which comes January 13. A generous offering was presented for the movement. Many new members were received.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the presentation of a gold signet ring to Dr. Carr Miller, the retiring president, who organized the club five years ago, and a gold bracelet to Miss Josephine D. Cronin, who has been the secretary since the organization of the club.

Delegates were present from the Newburgh and Poughkeepsie Townsend Clubs.

Barley Fire Loss Included Many Welfare Supplies

Adjusters for the H. R. St. John Agency, which held the insurance on the large house of DeWitt Barley at Whitfield, practically destroyed by fire Tuesday, agreed that the loss was a total one so far as insurance is concerned, following a survey of the damage Thursday.

Mr. Barley, who said that his loss would be at least $3,000 more than the insurance, will rebuild in the spring. At present he and his wife are making their home with his brother-in-law, Frank Woods.

Mr. Barley praised the new Accord Fire Department for their quick response to the alarm and the fine work they did. They were unable to do much toward saving the house, but did save the two-car garage, with one car in it at the time, located just at the rear of the house, and they also saved the barn directly across the road. The barn is a large one and contained about 10 tons of hay, along with tools and farm machinery.

The assistance given by neighbors also is appreciated. Through their efforts most of the furniture on the ground floor was removed, although much of it is damaged by water and necessary rough usage. The family, which included Mr. Barley's son, Haviland Barley, and family, lost among other things the larger portion of their clothing and practically everything on the upper floor of the house.

As town welfare officer Mr. Barley had a large stock of welfare supplies in the house, all of which were destroyed. They included about two tons of flour in sacks, held for distribution, eight or ten crates of eggs, bacon, rice, clothing and other supplies.

State Officials Open New Drive On Tuberculosis

A new program to eradicate tuberculosis in New York state received added impetus at a meeting held on Tuesday afternoon of leading state health officials and executives of voluntary health and welfare agencies called together by Dr. Edward S. Godfrey, Jr., state health commissioner.

The meeting held at the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company building was the first one of a special co-ordinating committee appointed by Commissioner Godfrey to launch an expanded case-finding and control program during 1941.

Under consideration are plans to intensify the application throughout the state of existing knowledge and facilities for the earlier discovery and treatment of tuberculosis in order to virtually wipe out the disease by 1960.

"I ventured the opinion two years ago," Commissioner Godfrey said, "that tuberculosis could be eliminated as an important medical and social problem within 25 years. I think the time can even be shortened somewhat if we apply to its control the knowledge gained by past experience and make the specific measures for its prevention the dominant factor in further reduction."

"I mean by this, dealing with tuberculosis as the infectious disease it is; discovering at the earliest moment those advanced cases, which are the spreaders of the infection and bringing them under proper care and control; discovering early cases early so that they can be treated competently and thereby be prevented from becoming spreaders."

"Whether it be by immediate defense or by long-term defense of public economy and solidarity tuberculosis must go. The sooner the better in order that we may then divert the money and effort now required for its treatment to other needs, which every year become more pressing."

"We did this with diphtheria and I believe it can be done with tuberculosis. I welcome the cooperation of other departments of State Government, the organized medical profession, the State Charities Aid Association and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in this enterprise."

Gives Figures

Mr. Homer Folks, secretary of the State Charities Aid Association announced that the State Association's tuberculosis budget is $61,000. Of this amount $51,800 is expected from the Association's share in the proceeds of the sale of Christmas Seals in the State, for participation in the tuberculosis eradication project during 1941.

A grant of $5,000 from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for this purpose was also announced.

"The time has come," said Mr. Folks, "to think and act in terms of wiping out tuberculosis within a generation. When the S.C.A.A. joined with the State Health Department in 1907 in the crusade against tuberculosis the mortality rate was 152.8 per 100,000 population. In 1939 it had declined to a rate of 36.4."

"We welcome the request of State Commissioner Godfrey to our State and local tuberculosis associations to share in a more intensive effort in these critical times, substantially to eliminate this disease."

Commissioner Godfrey indicated that the new Tuberculosis Co-ordinating Committee would meet at frequent intervals during 1941 to accelerate the momentum of the campaign as a health defense measure as well as for its long range beneficial value to the health and welfare to the people of the State.

Text of Lease-Lend Measure

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP).—The text of the measure introduced in Congress today to effect President Roosevelt's plan of lending or leasing military equipment to "democracies" follows:

A bill to further promote the defense of the United States, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that this act may be cited as an act to promote the defense of the United States.

Section 2. As used in this act—

(A) The term "defense article" means:

Any weapon, munition, aircraft, vessel, or boat;

Any machinery, facility, tool, material, or supply necessary for the manufacture, production, processing, repair, servicing, or operation of any article described in this subsection;

Any component material or part of or equipment for any article described in this subsection;

Any other commodity or article for defense. Such term "defense article" includes any article described in this subsection: Manufactured pursuant to section 3; or to which the United States or any foreign government has or hereafter acquires title, possession or control.

(B) The term "defense information" means any plan, specification, design, prototype, or information pertaining to any defense article.

Authorizations

Sec. 3 (A). Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, the President may, from time to time, when he deems it in the interest of national defense, authorize the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the government:

To manufacture in arsenals, factories and shipyards under their jurisdiction, or otherwise procure, any defense article for the government of any country whose defense the President deems vital to the defense of the United States.

proclamation requiring copper, brass, bronze, zinc, nickel, and potash to be exported only under export licenses, effective February 3. These materials, he said, are needed for American defense.

The President told reporters that he did not necessarily want the powers apparently contained in the British aid bill, but that somebody must have it in order to take quick action.

Replies in Negative

He replied in the negative when asked whether the legislation would have the effect of repealing the neutrality act ban against loans to belligerents and the Johnson Act prohibition against credits to World War debt defaulters.

The President told his press conference, however, that the language employed in the bill—that equipment loans could be made "notwithstanding" any prior acts—was the usual phrase in legislation and was required to avoid conflict of laws.

If there is any conflict, the President said, the later law supersedes the prior law.

In reply to a question from Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) Barkley said it was planned to have the House and Senate foreign affairs committees consider the legislation simultaneously in order to speed action.

In the Senate the bill was offered by Barkley himself, and in the House by Rep. Henry Ford (D., Mass.), the majority floor leader. The two men joined in issuing the following statement:

"The bill simply translates into legislative form the policy of making this country the arsenal for the democracies, and seeks to carry out President Roosevelt's pledge to send to these countries 'in ever increasing numbers, ships, planes, tanks, guns.'"

"It follows the precedent established by Congress last June when the President was empowered to authorize the secretaries of war and navy to manufacture, purchase and repair war materials for the American republics. Under the present bill, this country is enabled to furnish war materials of every kind to any country whose defense the President considers to be vital to the defense of the United States."

Blank-Check Legislation

Those who conferred with Mr. Roosevelt were tight-lipped when they left the White House at dusk yesterday, but one highly-placed administration leader declared that the legislation "is a blank check both so far as money and power are concerned."

Another declared that the bill "is so broad that the President can do almost anything he wants so long as congress puts up the money."

One informant, saying that the measure would clothe Mr. Roosevelt with the broadest powers since the bank crisis of the early New Deal, told reporters that it differed from many earlier administration measures in that congressional experts had played the major part in its drafting.

A summation of information obtained from the various conferees indicated that, if the bill were enacted, the President would come to congress from time to time with requests for specific appropriations to aid warning "democracies."

It was reported that the Chief Executive would outline in broad terms what he planned to do with the money, and, later, would submit actual details on how it had been spent.

Copies of the bill were handed around the desk in Mr. Roosevelt's oval study yesterday, but all who received them said the four-page typewritten documents would remain tucked in their pockets until

To sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of, to any such government any defense article.

To test, inspect, prove, repair, outfit, recondition or otherwise place in good working order any defense article for any such government.

To communicate to any such government any defense information, pertaining to any defense article furnished to such government under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

To release for export any defense article to any such government.

(B) The terms and conditions upon which any such foreign government receives any aid authorized under subsection (A) shall be those which the President deems satisfactory, and the benefit to the United States may be payment or repayment in kind or property or any other direct or indirect benefit which the President deems satisfactory.

Title Transfers

Sec. 4. All contracts or agreements made for the disposition of any defense article or defense information pursuant to Section 3 shall contain a clause by which the foreign government undertakes that it will not, without the consent of the President, transfer title to or possession of such defense article or defense information by gift, sale, or otherwise, or permit its use by anyone not an officer, employee, or agent of such foreign government.

Sec. 5. The secretary of war, the secretary of navy, or the head of any other department or agency of the government involved shall, when any such defense article or defense information is exported, immediately inform the department or agency designated by the President to administer section 6 of the act of July 2, 1940 (54 Stat. 714), of the quantities, character, value, terms of disposition, and destination of the article and information so exported.

Sec. 6 (A). There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the provisions and accomplish the purposes of this act.

(B) All money and all property which is converted into money received under section 3 from any government shall, with the approval of the director of the budget, revert to the respective appropriation or appropriations out of which funds were expended with respect to the defense article or defense information for which such consideration is received, and shall be available for expenditure for the purpose for which such expended funds were appropriated by law, during the fiscal year in which such funds are received and the ensuing fiscal year.

Shall Protect Rights

Sec. 7. The secretary of war, the secretary of navy, and the head of the department or agency shall in all contracts or agreements for the disposition of any defense article or defense information fully protect the rights of all citizens of the United States who have patent rights in and to any such article or information which is hereby authorized to be disposed of and the payments collected for royalties on such patents shall be paid to the owners and holders of such patents.

Sec. 8. The secretaries of war and of the navy are hereby authorized to purchase or otherwise acquire arms, ammunition, and implements of war produced within the jurisdiction of any country to which section 3 is applicable, whenever the President deems such purchase or acquisition to be necessary for the interests of the defense of the United States.

Sec. 9. The President may, from time to time, promulgate such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper to carry out any of the provisions of this act; and he may exercise any power or authority conferred on him by this act through such department, agency, or officer as he shall direct.

Justice Schirick Admits 74 Aliens To Citizenship

Holding one of the largest naturalization courts ever held in this county, Justice Harry E. Schirick Thursday told the 74 foreign born residents who were admitted to citizenship that America was no place for Fascists or Communists and that in the land of their adoption there was no room for "old world discord."

He cautioned the newly admitted citizens to put aside all sympathy for their native lands and to become really true Americans.

There were 98 applications before the court for admission to citizenship and of that number 74 were admitted, others being put over the term for various reasons. But one application was denied.

Justice Schirick told the applicants that they were being granted full American citizenship with the rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which is being offered by this country now, even when so much of the world seems upon the brink of disaster.

Urging the newly admitted citizens to shun groups which may seek to transplant discord from the old world in this country, he told the group that only 100 per cent Americans were wanted in this country and that "hyphenated Americans" with divided sympathies were not desirable citizens of this land.

A group of students from Public School No. 6 was present and led the entire assemblage in the salute to the flag after reciting the American creed.

THE GOVERNMENT LOAD

Any big crisis in this country naturally strengthens executive power and weakens congressional power. In time of war, the President automatically becomes head of the army and navy. Even in the present case, when it is not a question of actual war but only of preparedness, the executive power is greatly enlarged.

Thus, as a Washington correspondent observes, "A difficult time lies ahead for the parliamentary branch of our government. The tendency of the nation is to look more and more to the executive for leadership and less and less to the other branch. Government by checks and balances is virtually discarded, for all practical purposes, for high productive speed for national defense and assistance to Great Britain as part of that defense. 'Business as usual' goes out of the window."

This is a natural tendency, but not inevitable. Congress can still assert itself far more than it does, in constructive ways, if it has the will and ability to do so. A situation like the present one calls for the best talent available. The executive department itself needs a great deal of help, and should welcome it, from senators and representatives ready to carry on their part of the load.

HITLER'S RELIGIOUS FAITH

Adolf Hitler is always an interesting psychological case. Many would say psychopathic, but we need not insist on that. At worst, there is usually "method in his madness." And it is so in the present case.

Hitler seems to have turned religious! And his religion is not, as might have been expected from his earlier manifestations, the faith of Woden and Thor, primitive war gods of the Germanic and Scandinavian tribes before their conversion to Christianity. He evidently turns to the God of the Jews and Christians, when he says to his people:

"God will not abandon those who, threatened by the world, have determined with courageous hearts to help themselves." Referring evidently to the German Nazis.

In view of Hitler's past statements and attitudes with regard to religion, this statement, without further evidence, can hardly be taken as religious conversion. It may be meant to win back the support of German believers. Or it may merely mean that Hitler is scared.

THE ISSUE IS FREEDOM

Some people see the nation's problem today as a choice between war and peace. If that were the whole story, the choice would be easily made and it would be peace.

Others—and they appear to be a majority of the nation—see the choice as between freedom and slavery. If all saw it in that form, again there would be overwhelming agreement on freedom.

If freedom can be defended and maintained by peaceful means, then those are the means to employ. If a situation develops in which freedom must be fought for, then war it will be. Everyone hopes that war can be avoided. Increasingly it is seen, however, that only drastic measures can maintain the non-belligerent status—measures which make the nation's strength and determination so plain that trouble-makers will be compelled to drop their menacing plans.

May the nation not be misled, confused and weakened by argument around war? Freedom and how to secure it are the main problem today.

FIRE STORY

Here's one of the most interesting fire yarns we've seen lately. It sounds crazy but is vouched for by a Fire Department in Ohio.

Herbert C. Bromelmeier, a noodle salesman, last Sunday evening at 11 o'clock, fixing his furnace for the night, emptied the ashes into a wooden container in the basement and went to bed.

At 2:30 a. m. he was awakened by a persistent ringing of his doorbell. When he finally got up to see who wanted him at that outlandish hour, he found the house full of smoke and called the fire department.

The firemen found that there had been a hot clinker in the ashes, which had ignited the container, which had set fire to a partition, whereby the doorbell wire had been short-circuited and put into action.

Not a bad idea, at that! Now there may be a lot of tinkers improvising such fire-alarm systems. And it's all right, if they don't copy the whole program. Don't put ashes and clinkers in wooden buckets.

ERRATIC BIRDS

During the last week of December members of the National Association of Audubon Societies completed the organization's annual bird census. The first winter count was made in 1899. Since that time participation has been increasingly popular with more bird-lovers regularly trekking through woods, fields and marshes. In addition to enjoying the work they do, the information brought in by counters has included data useful in other branches of natural science.

There's an odd fact about the latest census. It revealed in the New York area more rare species of birds than have ever before been found there at this time of year. They are not war refugees, however. They've merely overstayed their usual time in that region because of the prolonged mild weather. Now that winter has come they may take quick flight to more pleasing climes.

It used to be thought that birds migrated when the time came regardless of the weather. Certainly many of them come north in the spring before they are justified by the temperature. But everything seems to be topsy-turvy these days. The weather itself hasn't been following its usual procedure so how can birds or humans be expected to follow their proper seasonal activities?

It's going to be awful hard to keep Senator Glass, who's only 83 years old, from leading a military expedition against Germany.

Modern wars are fought by steel, and Uncle Sam has plenty for himself and his friends.

Those Greeks are too unethical. They simply don't understand that men can't lick tanks.

It would be interesting to know whether Hitler himself knows what he's going to do next.

HOW PNEUMONIA MAY BE PREVENTED

So startling has been the drop in the death rate in pneumonia due to sulphanilimide and similar drugs that a movie shows two physicians trying to reduce the death rate to nothing as they feel that there should now be no deaths in pneumonia.

Despite this new and effective drug, the number of cases of pneumonia is not decreasing, in fact it is increasing, because one attack of pneumonia in an individual does not prevent further attacks, as it does in some ailments, but actually predisposes the patient to further attacks.

In one country where there has been stress, strain, overwork and under-nutrition for some years, one of the reports from the physicians of that country shows a great increase in the number of cases of pneumonia, particularly among men between the ages of 35 and 45.

It was found that the number of cases increased greatly during the cold months. This was thought to be due to there being less sunshine during the winter months but further investigation showed that coldness and dampness were equally, if not more, to blame.

Most of us are aware of the chill experienced after being heated by exercise or after having a hot bath. The chilliness or coldness of the air seems to stiffen or tighten the muscles. This is well known to baseball pitchers who often on a warm day, put on a sweater or put their pitching arm in the sleeve of their sweater while their team is at bat. Cold air striking the warm body means that the blood going back to the lungs is chilled and not able to take on oxygen or throw off wastes as well. This blood is therefore not able to throw off or prevent the organisms of pneumonia or other diseases from starting life in the body.

Heat is life to the body and its defenses and cold has the opposite effect, particularly in those who are tired, run down, and are undernourished. This is the reason that when a husband has been stricken with pneumonia, after he recovers often his wife is likewise stricken, not because she caught the pneumonia from her husband (because pneumonia is not contagious), but because she was so tired, worried and undernourished from waiting on her husband that her resistance was low.

To avoid pneumonia then, we should eat well, get plenty of sleep, and avoid draughts, dampness and cold when we are heated.

Mr. Church's fishermen are professionals, sailing out of Gloucester or Boston or maybe New Bedford. They are the men of the Howard Blackburn type, Blackburn being the man who was lost from his ship in a dory, and rowed his partner to shore through zero weather after bending his hands so they would

BABSON ON BUSINESS

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Babson Sees A Tough Session
Babson Park, Florida, Jan. 10.—Just a week ago today the 77th Congress settled into harness. They have in this current session the toughest job to face in many years. Many unsolved problems have been held over from the old Congress. And our legislators in Washington face many new ones. Things are moving fast. Straightforward thinking and no monkey business is the order of the day. A great responsibility for the course of action our country will take rests upon the shoulders of the law makers we voted into office last November 6. If Congress measures up to our expectations, our affairs are in good hands. If its members succumb to pressure groups and lack the courage of independence, we will find ourselves in a bad way.

Reckless Spending
After all Congress reflects, to a very large extent, the concern of its constituents, the fears of the voters who put them into office. The same questions regarding the size of our national debt, national income and inflation scare them as much as they do the average man in the street. For years I have been advocating proper pensions for Congressmen. As the representatives of the wealthiest people in the world, they ought, after certain years of office, to be paid a sufficient sum of money to enable them to live comfortably in event of defeat at their next election and to enable them to speak and to vote with the courage that financial independence gives.

But would our people vote such an arrangement? I am afraid not if they are to be put into office. Hence, if Congress itself becomes frightened, we shall have only ourselves to blame. I believe that most Congressmen secretly feel that we might as well distribute our money over here now as to have it become valueless later. Thus, as you read of huge new appropriations, consider carefully if they are to be used with the idea in mind of saving England. It is conceivable that Congress may interpret their acts during the current session as a final means of getting more houses, automobiles, and refrigerators for their own constituents.

What Can We Do?
If the 1941 Congress turns out a defeatist group, we shall be in a tough spot. I say this regardless of my recent optimistic forecast for the current year. Congress is very apt to neither resist nor legislate (and there is plenty of it) nor to enact needed good regulations. Congress is more likely now to think of the immediate needs of the voters "back home" than it is of their children and grandchildren. I fear no more New Deal legislation in 1941, but I do fear wasteful appropriations made for selfish political purposes under the false guise of defense.

Do not let Congress "sell out" democracy and all the good in it for a mere mess of pottage. Usually, I have faith in our Congressmen but, collectively, I am fearful of their lack of courage and faith. We, however, have must back it up. But it would do no harm and might do some good if each of us wrote our representative in Washington, expressed our faith, and asked for a show of courage and foresightedness in these perplexing and serious times.

freeze around the oars. They began their fishing early in the 17th century in Chebeco boats and pinkies, and now they continue it in Diesel craft which sometimes have such luxurious features as showers for the crew. But, as James B. Connolly shows in the text he provides for Mr. Church's photographs, danger was sailing along beside the craft of the early 1600's and danger is still there today.

So far as beauty goes, the climax of Mr. Church's effort comes in the eighties and lasts through the turn of the century. Those were the days when fishing boats had to combine utter seaworthiness with high speed for the race to market. It often meant a great deal of money to beat the fleet to the warf and get the top of the market; as far back as the eighties, Mr. Connolly shows, the elder Burgess of Boston was designing Gloucester and Boston fishing schooners. Other great racing designers followed—M. C. Manu, Crowninshield, Paine, the younger Burgess and Lawlor among them. In 1892, Mr. Connolly regaled Gloucester had an anniversary fishermen's race. The official weather report put the wind at sixty miles, but the "Harry Beland" carried her whole four lower and both topsails throughout. She won, too.

By chance, B. B. Crowninshield, of the family of designers, has chosen this time to tell of his family's speciality, the fore-and-afters. The book is intended for the expert amateur and these must certainly find it both valuable and authoritative. The author calls the fore-and-afters, merely "Fore-and-Afters."

Fiji Chiefs Aid Britain

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

Suva, Fiji (AP)—The Council of Chiefs in Fiji has voted 2,000 pounds more toward purchase of bombing planes for Great Britain. This brings the total Fiji contributions to 60,000 pounds.

The marine corps now has about 44,000 enlisted men and 3,000 officers.

Today in Washington

Partisanship, Not Surprising at Any Time in Congress, Shows Itself Now Because There's No Harmony Between Factions
By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Jan. 10.—"I did not applaud because I do not trust him." This outspoken comment by a Republican veteran in the House of Representatives was made apropos of Mrs. Roosevelt's expressed curiosity as to why Republicans were not observed applauding the President's address to Congress this week. But this is not really surprising. In other joint sessions the same thing has happened.

Today in the midst of a war crisis it might be laid aside in the interest of national unity. But it is not being laid aside for the reason that the President and the opposition inside and outside of Congress have not made peace. Maybe Mr. Roosevelt doesn't believe in appeasement even inside the United States.

No progress can be made by insistence on the surrender of the minority. One side must begin to trust the other and the when in public office can afford to take the initiative because they can wield more power and they have more access every day to the channels of public expression than do their opponents.

A good beginning has been made, nevertheless, by some of the opponents of Mr. Roosevelt. This correspondent has learned, for instance, that if Mr. Roosevelt were to have some one sit at the many thousands of telegrams which he receives strongly commending his thrice chat and message to Congress he would find therein the names of some of the most prominent business men and financiers in the country—men who never voted for him in any election, but who think he is 100 per cent right on his foreign policy.

Applause such as Mr. Roosevelt has never before received is in evidence in Washington in his own executive office. Now the attitude of Republican congressmen is not difficult to understand. They feel Mr. Roosevelt is still at war with them. He never mentioned the name of his opponent in the campaign, they said, and he failed to attend the gridiron dinner at which Mr. Willkie was an invited guest. This may seem a trivial basis for complaint and it probably is, but it illustrates an attitude and an atmosphere which governs the strictly political when congressmen sit in a joint session firmly convinced that the artificial draft in the Democratic national convention last July and the exploitation of the war crisis abroad were responsible for the breaking of a third-term precedent and the loss to them of a national election.

But while there is a certain ill-timeliness on the Republican side, there is another factor which keeps the President from moving over toward his opponents in gestures of friendliness. Just about the time Mr. Roosevelt gets ready to show a trustfulness in the business and industrial men who have patriotically offered their services to the government, he gets what has become known as "Washington Wingers." As the story goes, Mr. Roosevelt responds accordingly.

An example of "winging" which is being widely reported, occurred the other day. Mr. Roosevelt had asked that the executive order whereby the duties of the office for production management were to be outlined be written by the lawyers in and around the defense commission. A certain group of lawyers from New York worked on the task. Some comment is said to have been made by one of the lawyers to the effect that if the language of the executive order could be handled adroitly, all the advantages which labor unions had gotten under the New Deal could be swept aside and the reactionary elements could get back all their previous weapons that could be used against labor.

Now maybe the lawyers said this and maybe they didn't. But by the time the story was repeated on supposedly unquestioned authority, the New Dealers were able to prevent the executive order from being written as originally intended and also Mr. Roosevelt did not give Mr. Knudsen the broad authority which a fortnight ago it was generally believed he would delegate to the former motor company executive.

These instances must sound petty and inconsequential to the outsider, but they are constantly heard in the Washington atmosphere. When certain cabinet officers, capable of a bitterness unparalleled in official life, express themselves for instance, in ways that Capitol Hill learns about, they constantly do a disservice to the President. Altogether, the chances of getting national unity seem ever so much better outside than inside of the national capital.

Mutual trust is difficult to establish when men are beset with their own pride—and who have more pride or ego than political folks and some of the officeholders whose heads swell up when they are given authority? Many of them assume they own the government and that the people are to be divided into two classes when they come before government tribunals—those that have supported and those that have opposed the administration in past elections.

Some day, if the President rose above the petty squabbling of Washington by acts that carried conviction and by gestures of friendliness to his opponents, he would be amazed at the progress he would make. But as matters stand today, Republican leaders who want to see Britain win are fearful that if America enters the war, the Roosevelt administration will establish such control over business and industry as will completely destroy the free enterprise system and civil liberties. They may be seeing things under the bed, but it is what many of them think and it is one of the main reasons why they do not trust the President's policies and do not applaud in joint sessions. Such being the case, there is a great chance for Mr. Roosevelt in his third term to break down these suspicions and do the things that will remove distrust and put everybody, including the Republican politicians, back on his foreign policy, no matter what the ultimate result may be.

Washington Daybook

Washington—The opening of Congress, as a dramatic spectacle, ordinarily is a hooperoo, a traditionally dull matter in which certain dull traditions are observed without any straining for pomp.

The House of Representatives meets, answers roll call, elects a speaker (Sam Rayburn of Texas this time), gets sworn in en masse (unless there is someone whose credentials are challenged), appoints a committee of three to notify the President that Congress now is in session and ready to receive any communication he desires to pass along.

The Senate meets, answers roll call, swears in the members in blocs of four, appoints a committee of two to notify the President.

The five committee members from the two houses meet in the cloakroom, shake hands around, perhaps have a cup of coffee and then go back to their respective halls to report that the President has been duly notified. He hasn't, of course, but the custom is a hangover from pre-telephone days when the boys had to take to horse and splash through the mud to the White House, or else the President might not have known for days but that the gentlemen were up on the Hill fighting a mass duel.)

Then the two houses adjourn.

1,000 Bills

When the 77th Congress convened, the House ran off its routine on schedule, except for the big parade to the hopper where the members drop their proposed bills. Before the gavel fell, one hour and 56 minutes after convening, the boys in the House had poured approximately 1,000 bills and resolutions into the hopper.

Over in the Senate, however, more than one of the members must have been bored with the lack of excitement on opening day. Or maybe it was because the spiderwork of steel rafters recently installed to bolster the chamber roof lent an air of strangeness and unreality that had the gentlemen jump. At any rate, in the 38 minutes that the Senate was in session plenty happened.

In the first place, 74-year-old Sen. Hiram Johnson of California, re-elected on an all-party ticket, let it be known that he would have none of this business of being escorted down the aisle by his state colleague to take the oath of office. One of the Senate's oldest customs is that the incoming senator shall be escorted to the Senate president's platform to take the oath. When Sen. Sheridan Downey, California Democrat, stepped up to accompany Senator Johnson, the latter declined, and firmly. It was reported, how authentically I do not know, that the Senate veteran protested that it was a silly custom and that he was perfectly capable of walking up the aisle alone. It was the fifth time Senator Johnson had taken the trip, the first time he had taken it alone.

Custom went to pieces again when ex-Sen. William H. King, of Utah, kept his seat and calmly read the Congressional Record while his successor, Sen. Abe Murdock, was being sworn in. According to Senate rules, Senator King, being a former member, has the privilege of being on the floor whenever he pleases, but Capitol veterans said it was the first time in memory that any outgoing senator had kept his seat while his successor was being given the oath of office.

The Langer Case

The real dramatic climax of the day, however, came when Sen. William Langer, North Dakota, stood up to take the oath and Senator Barkley, majority leader, interrupted: "There have been filed with the Senate and I now have on my desk charges of various sorts from citizens of North Dakota objecting to administration of the oath of office to the senator-elect, Mr. Langer. I have read these charges and affidavits, which, if true, are serious and would seriously affect the qualifications and fitness of the senator-elect to become a member of this body."

It was about that time that you could have heard the proverbial pin crash to the floor. But the Senate beat the problem in short order. After assuring the senator-elect that the Privileges and Elections committee would give speedy consideration to the matter, the body agreed to let Mr. Langer take his oath "without prejudice to the senator and without prejudice to the rights of the Senate."

Of such stuff is Senate history made.

Bronx Negro Electrocuted At Sing Sing for Murder

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—Major Greenfield, 34, Bronx negro janitor who spent nine months in Sing Sing without a visit from relative or friend, was electrocuted last night for the slaying of Vincent Cangro, 45, negro WPA worker. Cangro's body was found Christmas morning, 1939, in a Bronx lot, the neck bound by wire and rope, the head bludgeoned by a hammer.

Greenfield, convicted of first-degree murder last March, maintained that the slaying was the result of "a panic-stricken mind in self-defense."

Yesterday, he said, "my head was in a whirl from too much drinking. I didn't intend to kill anybody."

The newly organized Mid-Hudson Valley Architectural Society held its first meeting in Kingston last evening following a dinner at the Stuyvesant Hotel. Those who attended the meeting are shown above. Seated left to right are Charles Pitts, secretary, from Poughkeepsie; President Myron S. Teller, John O'Connor, Charles S. Keefe, Augustus Schrowang and Gordon S. Marvel, treasurer, of Newburgh. Standing in the same order are: Vernon Wheelock and Robert Noll of Poughkeepsie, Girard Betts of Kingston, Vice President Herbert Seipel of Newburgh, Harry Halverson and Hugh McCullough of Kingston, Rolf C. Dreyer, Ralph Lovlock and Vice President Louis Booth of Poughkeepsie.

Architects Name Vice Presidents Elected at Meeting

Two vice-presidents were added to the list of officers of the Mid-Hudson Architectural Society, which held its January meeting at the Stuyvesant Hotel, Kingston, Thursday night. They are Louis Booth of Poughkeepsie and Herbert T. Seipel of Newburgh. Other officers, previously elected, are Myron S. Teller, Kingston, president; Charles Pitts, Poughkeepsie, secretary; Gordon Marvel, Newburgh, treasurer.

President Teller presided at the dinner at 7 o'clock and the meeting which followed. There was extended discussion of a plan to hold a city-wide exhibition. Much interest was shown in the plan and the exhibition probably will be held early in the spring. There will be one general exhibit, which will be shown at different times in the three participating cities, Kingston, Poughkeepsie and Newburgh. The exhibit will feature work done by members of the society.

Last night's meeting was attended by 15 members of the organization. The next meeting will be held in Newburgh on Thursday, February 13.

Melting snow often causes leaks in well-worn roofs, necessitating urgent repairs. In such cases the snow can be removed by chemicals, torches or shoveling and a new roof of asphalt shingles laid directly over the old one. The old roof must be completely dry, however, before the re-roofing can proceed.

Woolly Sheep in Cotton Cloth Will Be Tested in Wyoming

New Orleans, Jan. 10 (AP).—This is a story of woolly sheep in cotton clothing, a devious, modern method of helping the Dixie share-cropper.

Five hundred coats for shorn sheep will be shipped to Wyoming next week to carry on an experiment which a government official here today said could mean a new use for cotton and a potential consumption of 50,000 bales annually.

They will be worn from shearing time to shearing time to protect the sheep from the weather. The sheep's wool will grow under the cotton jacket.

The experiment is being conducted by Dr. Robert H. Burns of the Wyoming agricultural station in cooperation with the government's New Orleans Southern Regional Laboratory, trying to find new uses for cotton.

The coats weigh about a pound, are cut fairly low under the neck and can be let out like a maternity jacket for lamb-heavy ewes.

Miss Lewis Speaks On Job Guidance*State Associate Director Tells of Bureau's Work

Miss Clare Lewis, associate director of the New York state employment service, was the principal speaker at the Mid-Hudson Guidance Association held on Wednesday in McCabe's Restaurant on Wall street. Her topic was "Employment Guidance."

Miss Lewis gave an interesting address on the work the employment service was doing.

At the business meeting a committee was appointed to suggest plans for a one day regional conference to be held in the spring. The members of the committee are Miss Anne Wells of Newburgh, Henry Dunbar of Kingston, and Miss Jean Cole of Poughkeepsie.

Clarence Failor of Poughkeepsie and Alfred Bruckert of Kingston were named as delegates to attend the National Vocational Guidance Association conference to be held in Atlantic City in February.

Miss Sallie Licht of Poughkeepsie reported on the various study groups which are being conducted by the association. The next meetings are to be held as follows:

Jan. 14, study on group guidance under Clarence Failor.

Jan. 15, study on psychology under Henry Dunbar.

Jan. 21, study on legislation for youth, the wage and hour law, under Paul Hasbrouck.

The next meeting of the association will be held in the Wappingers Central School, Wappingers Falls, March 21. There will be a panel discussion on the topic, "Are we really fitting youth for life?"

The conference here was attended by 40 people, including four guests from the Central School at Stamford. George E. Hutcherson of the state education department in Albany was also a guest.

The conference was conducted by George MacAndrews of the Arlington High School, who is president of the Mid-Hudson Guidance Association.

With shorter winter days, outside light is at a premium in the average house. Even the best of electric light is a poor substitute for natural light. A whole section of almost any outside wall can be cut away and filled in with insulating glass blocks to capture every last ray of light and diffuse it throughout the room. A too-dark living room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom or bath can be softly, naturally lighted by means of this translucent wall material.

Magic Spring

YESTERDAY: Polly and David had to postpone their marriage because at the last minute Peter Wiley, David's young cousin, descended upon him. And David must care for the boy. David is working at the Powers Lumber Company, remembering Peter's desire to fix up the old and bankrupt inn which is David's own possession besides his home. Peter wants to fill the old swimming pool.

Chapter Nine

Lunch With The Boss

"I'm afraid," David remembered saying, "that the pipes which used to bring the water down from the spring are all rusty and clogged. But I'll see what I can do."

David now turned an invoice sheet and went on with his checking. Not a bad idea, having a place to swim when the hot weather set in. But like everything else, money was the chief issue. It would probably take quite a sum to put the pool in order.

He heard a footfall behind him, and turned to see Mr. Powers.

"Hello, David!" the lumberman greeted. "That's a beautiful lot of pine we're getting off in this shipment."

"Yes, sir," said David. "It is. Smells good, too, doesn't it?"

Mr. Powers breathed deeply. "Nothing more fragrant than the odor of clean lumber," he said. And then: "By the way, I've just gotten hold of a very good book on reforestation. I thought you might like to read it, since our talk the other day about the time when all the trees would be felled."

"Thanks," said David. "I would like to read it." He grinned. "I had a dream the other night, in which I was wandering through a huge tract of land on which was nothing but endless tree-stumps. And all at once I seemed to hear a voice saying, 'Please plant a new tree every time you cut down one of us.' It sure got me to thinking."

"I've seen just such a tract of land in reality," Mr. Powers said. "It's a pretty tragic-looking sight. I tell you, come on up to the house to lunch with me. I'll give you the book, and you can have a look at the rejuvenation of a tract."

Margo's been getting it in shape. Maybe you two can get in a set or two."

"Are you sure it won't interfere with Margo's plans?" David asked. "Having a guest for lunch on such short notice?"

"Certainly not," said Mr. Powers. "But I'll go telephone her that I'm bringing you with me."

"All right," said David. "Thanks. I would like to see that book—but I reckon my tennis is pretty rusty. I haven't played for a mighty long time."

A short time later he was in the lumber plant office. He had just begun a typed tabulation of the shipment of lumber he had been checking out in the yard, when the telephone rang.

"For you, David," said someone who answered it.

"Thanks," said David. He walked over and took the receiver. "Hello!" he said.

"David, this is Polly. I'm calling you from the team room. Could you come here for your lunch today? I want to talk to you for a few minutes."

David was on the verge of saying he would be there, when he remembered Mr. Powers' invitation.

"Gosh, honey," he said. "I'm sorry. Mr. Powers has asked me to go up to his house for lunch."

"Oh!" said Polly.

"He's got a book on reforestation he wants me to read," David went on. "We're both interested in that sort of thing, you know."

"Yes, I know," said Polly. And then: "All right; what I've got to talk over will keep."

"Couldn't I come over to your place this evening?" David asked. "Of course," said Polly, "unless Margo Powers dates you up."

Tonight At Eight

THAT, David thought, didn't sound a bit like Polly. The slight tinge of sarcasm he detected in her remark was not characteristic of Polly—not a bit.

"There's no danger of that," he said. "Girls like Margo don't date up smalltown guys like me."

"No." Again that tinge of sarcasm. "I'm afraid you don't know very much about women. But I'll look for you around eight."

"I'll be there," David assured. "Can't you tell me now what's on your mind—and then discuss it in detail this evening?"

"I'd rather not," said Polly. "Not over the telephone."

"Okay, then—Tonight at eight." David hung up the receiver and went back to his typing. Something was bothering Polly. He could tell by the tone of her voice. It was probably the same thing that had been bothering her the other evening out at the Inn. It worried him. He wished that he hadn't told Mr. Powers that he would go up to the house for his lunch hour. . . . He would much rather lunch at the team room, and find out what was on Polly's mind. He was even tempted to break the engagement, ask Mr. Powers if he could make it some other day. And yet he didn't like to do this. After all, Mr. Powers was his boss, and he was trying to be kind and helpful. . . . Finally he forced himself to put everything out of his mind but the work at hand. He finished the tabulation just as Mr. Powers came out of his private office to say that Margo was expecting them at twelve-thirty sharp.

And presently he was seated in the long, paneled dining room of the Powers house up, on the hill.

"I personally selected every piece of oak that went into those panels," Mr. Powers said with pride. "A lot of people go to Europe and buy the paneled walls of some castle, but not Andy Powers—Me for the wood of my own country."

Margo laughed. "Suppose you forget wood for a little while, Dad," she said. "Surely you and David have plenty of contact with wood down at the plant. Let's talk about something else."

"All right," said her father. "I guess I do talk business too much. Go on, you two—cousin, and talk about what interests you. I'll apply myself to the food."

"But I like to discuss business with you," said David. "I'm all wrapped up in my work. I like it."

"That's fine, my boy! But we mustn't bore our guests!" "Hurry and finish your lunch," said Margo. "I want you to have a look at the tennis court. Dad said we might have time for a set."

"I'd like to," said David, "but I just remembered I haven't any tennis sneakers."

"Dad has some around someplace," said Margo. "You can wear his."

"He'd be lost in them," Andy Powers laughed. "He couldn't even keep them on."

"Oh, darn!" said Margo. "Ask me for tennis some other time," said David, "and then I'll come prepared."

"I will," said Margo. "Don't worry!"

Margo Begins

HOWEVER, as soon as the lunch was over, she insisted that David see the court, whether they played or not. And they went out a side door down through a beautiful sunken garden and across a stretch of velvety lawn.

"There!" said Margo. "Isn't it a beauty?"

"Gosh!" said David. "It sure is. Darned if I don't believe I'll take off my shoes and play in my stocking-feet."

"I tried to have the court made exactly like one I once saw on the French Riviera," said Margo. "All I needed was a view of the ocean. I had to be content with a view of our lovely pond."

David looked at her. "It must be pretty wonderful to have seen so many places," he said. "You must have stored up a lot of memories for your old age."

"Perhaps," said Margo. "But sometimes I wonder if people like you haven't stored up a lot of memories also—maybe memories that are a lot more worthwhile than mine."

"I wouldn't know about them being more worthwhile than yours, Margo," David said. "But I've got a lot of memories, all right—They aren't backed by a lot of color and fun, though. I'm afraid most of them would strike you as being pretty drab."

Margo dropped down upon a bench near the tennis court. "Sit down," she invited. And when David had taken a place beside her, she said: "From what Dad tells me, you've spent most of your life looking after other people."

"Oh, well, that's was nothing," David said. "After all, they were my kin-folks. And I reckon, I'm one of those fellows who have a pretty strong family feeling."

"But you missed a lot of fun," Margo said. "Sure! Lots of men and women of my generation have missed that. We get sort of used to it after a while."

Margo leaned toward David. Her arm touched his. "Give me a cigarette, David, will you?" she said.

David took a package from his pocket. He lighted a cigarette for Margo, and one for himself. Margo drew on hers, and said: "It's not too late for you to have some fun, you know."

"I reckon not," said David. "But fun takes time, and I seem to be pretty short of that nowadays; what with working at the plant, taking care of my new charge and trying to shine up things out at the Inn."

"I saw Peter the other day," said Margo. "He's a cute little fellow, isn't he?"

"Yes," said David. Then laughing he said: "But I'm afraid Peter wouldn't like your description of him."

"Why?"

"Oh, I don't know exactly, only he considers himself quite a young man, and he's capable as all get-out," David looked at his watch. "Say, it's later than I thought! I ought to be getting back to the plant."

Margo got up. She crushed out her cigarette. "I'm sorry we didn't get in some tennis," she said as they walked back to the house. "But now that the days are getting longer, maybe we can get in some sets in the evenings."

A QUESTION: WHAT DOES AMERICA MEAN TO YOU?

What does America mean to me? It means a way of life which makes life worthwhile. It means I am free to dream and (if I am willing to work hard) to make my dreams come true. It means I am free to climb as high as my heart will carry me, and there is no one to ask, "Who was your father? What was his faith? Where was he born?"

American Democracy means to me that I can go to my boy or girl and say, "You will live under a government of laws and those laws will protect you from any men who preach hate or persecution. It means no man will ever come to tell you—This is what you must believe; this and this alone is what you may read or write or think or speak—as millions are told today in so many countries where men are no longer free."

What does American Democracy mean to me? It means tolerance and hope and courage in a world in which millions pray for tolerance denied—in which millions grope for hope and courage denied. Above all it means I am free to reach out to God as my children will be free to reach out to God—and possess that most priceless of all jewels—the jewel of Faith.

The lamps grow dim nearly everywhere. Men surrender, or their liberties, their faith. American Democracy means that we who are lucky enough to live under it will never be called upon to surrender it—and having it, we shall be free. To be free is to live. To be no longer free is to know only a living death.

The call today is for sacrifice. The good American will not be the one who demands to know how much preparedness will cost in taxes. He will be the one who asks, "How much can I possibly give—for my country?" He will not be the man who asks, "How much can I earn on this contract for preparedness?" He will be the man who asks only, "How little do I need out of it for myself in my country's hour of need?"

The days we are entering will see men working together more fully and wholeheartedly than in any period in our history. We will work for one great reason—all that we do we do of our own free will. No one MAKES us work and sacrifice for the common good; we WANT to.

This scheme goes the New Deal one better: Bride—I want to open an account with your bank. Teller—Yes, madam. A current or deposit account?

Bride—Well, I thought I'd try one of your withdrawal accounts to start with.

ONLY YESTERDAY

It takes no time at all. And the cost is small. For a trip down memory lane; Although feeble and blind, With youth far behind, You may live in the sun again.

A dear mother's care, Or a baby's prayer, Or a love forgotten long; Will return a shine, Through the span of time, With the words of an old sweet song.

At a fancy dress dance for children a policeman stationed at the door was instructed not to admit any adult. An excited woman came running up to the door and demanded admission.

Policeman—I'm sorry, ma'am, but I can't let anyone in but children.

Woman (excitedly)—But my child is in there as a butterfly and has forgotten her name!

Policeman—Can't help it. Orders is orders. You'll have to let her represent a caterpillar.

The pay-off on production—not on criticism.

Father—The man who marries my daughter will get a prize. Young Man—May I see it, please?

If we can deal successfully with today we can deal with tomorrow successfully when it comes.

Foreign Policy Foes Criticize Lease-Lend Bill; Clark Says It Gives F. D. R. Right to War

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—Foes of President Roosevelt's foreign policy criticized today the bill authorizing transfer of American-made military equipment to warring "democracies," and Senator Clark (D., Mo.) declared that the legislation "is simply a bill authorizing the President to declare war."

Administration supporters, however, expressed confidence that the Senate would give overwhelming approval to the measure after the House has acted.

When the bill was introduced in the House by Rep. McCormack (D., Mass.), a dozen members jumped up to make remarks, but Speaker Rayburn recognized Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the Republican floor leader.

No Republicans Consulted
Martin said that no Republican members of Congress apparently had been consulted in preparation of the legislation and inquired whether it was to be considered in a non-partisan manner.

McCormack retorted that he was "very sorry that my friend should raise that question" and asserted he "assumed that national defense transcended party politics."

Martin agreed, but said "we should be given some consideration in preparation of this program."

In the Senate, Senator McClellan (D., Tenn.), terming Adolf Hitler a "devil incarnate," proposed "repeal of all laws which would in any way interfere with our giving Great Britain all aid that the President or Congress might find necessary."

When McClellan took his seat, Senator Danaher (R., Conn.) read a message by President Millard Fillmore (1850-1853) urging non-intervention in internal affairs of other nations.

LaFollette to Oppose
Senator LaFollette (Prog., Wis.), who endorsed President Roosevelt's successful bid for a third term, told reporters that he would oppose the measure.

"This is not a request for a blank check," LaFollette said. "It is a demand that Congress dictate vital and important powers. Senator Green (D., R. I.) told reporters that "this is a bill to aid the United States, using Great Britain to help us while we prepare our defense."

"So long as Britain holds out," he said, "the more time we will have to prepare."

Senator Clark of Missouri, foe of administration foreign policies, asserted that the measure permits the President "to declare war so far as international affairs are concerned and to set up a totalitarian government so far as domestic affairs are concerned."

Chairman Sheppard (D., Tex.) of the Senate military committee, said he thought that Congress would approve the measure because of the world emergency. Senator Hughes (D., Del.) said he was prepared to support it because he was "inclined to go pretty far in aiding Britain."

Girl's Mother Opposes Parole for Stephenson

Indianapolis, Jan. 10 (AP)—"Stephenson should never be let out. I'll never consent to his release."

In a scarcely audible voice the aged mother of Madge Oberholzer, for whose death D. C. Stephenson is serving a life term, testified yesterday to a parole for the once powerful head of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan.

Stephenson's petition for a parole, which the Indiana clemency commission took under advisement, is his first although he has waged a continuous legal battle for freedom since he was sentenced to the Michigan city state prison 15 years ago.

Miss Oberholzer, a statehouse employee, took poison while on a week-end trip with Stephenson. The state charged that she had been raped shortly before she took her life.

Her mother, Mrs. Matilda Oberholzer, told the clemency commission: "Stephenson is in the place where he should end his days. I don't think it would be safe for him to be out."

"I've cried and I've prayed and prayed to find a solution for my daughter's life being taken. The only solution I found was that it took a life to put that man where he belongs."

Freeman Officers
The annual meeting of The Freeman Publishing Company was held this morning at the main office, Freeman Square. Following the meeting the directors elected as officers for the ensuing year: Mrs. Lucia deL. Klock, president; Frederick Hoffman, vice president; and Harry duBois Frey, secretary and treasurer.

10 Ways Given for Women To Look Smart in Spring

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—Here are 10 ways for women to look up-to-date this spring, summarized from the two-day $1,000,000 show "Fashion Futures":

Choose a hat that is reasonably sane (not too grimly reasonable) and above all, becoming; and wear it straight—not cocked over one eye.

Brighten your navy blue outfit, if you choose one, with "pursuit red" accessories, white touches, or a pink petticoat that occasionally shows when a spring breeze lifts your hemline.

Choose a cape outfit—solid color full-length wool cape over silk dress, hip-length wool cape over wool dress, maybe in two tones of color; floor-length flowing jersey cape over evening gown.

Buy a bright, slim reefer coat—spring green, parma violet, or Chinatown Red.

Wear a slim little two-piece suit, with either a plain or pepum jacket. And—

Consider green as the leading new spring color, with all the beiges, off-whites and light browns in a prominent place; navy still good; combinations of black and white popular.

Be sure your new outfit doesn't have a "football shoulder," but a softer, feminine shoulder sloping, drooping, but not drooping.

Choose either a clinging silhouette or a billowy skirted gown for evening; maybe a pale chiffon or marganya with long, full sleeves, or a picture dress harking back to the 1850's.

Have a South American, Greek, British, Chinese or Turkish note in your costume. Or maybe a Maharane turban. Or a good old United States patriotic emblem somewhere.

And after it's paid for, don't that "purebred look."

The final highlight of the largest all-American style show ever held for the fashion trade was the selection of Miss Josephine Caldwell of Philadelphia last night as "Miss Fashion Futures." She wore a black chiffon evening dress.

tell how much of these assets had been used up, the board said. "The situation cannot, however, be adequately presented in terms of such figures. In the first place there is no one figure that really measures British dollar resources."

Then it explained that some of the wealth in the empire belonged to other nations, that some of the securities—although intrinsically valuable—had no immediate market, that gold held on the other side of the Atlantic might be sunk en route, and that other assets might lose much of their apparent value if they had to be sold in a relatively short period of time and swamped the market.

Of the remaining empire assets, the board said much of these already have been pledged for payment of contracts when the purchased airplanes or other materials are delivered.

and that bombs were also dropped on docks at Brest, France, and on oil targets at Rotterdam, Holland. London dispatches described the Nazi Luftwaffe's overnight raids as among the biggest and most widespread in recent weeks, with Liverpool raided at frequent intervals over a period of several hours and German bombers fanning out over the island kingdom from Wales to northeast England.

A British communiqué, however, declared casualties were "nowhere large."

In southern England, a giant explosion in the sky during a barrage by anti-aircraft guns shook houses 10 miles away apparently a bomb-launched raider blown to pieces by a direct hit.

In London, two persons were killed when an anti-aircraft shell fell to the earth before exploding.

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 10 (AP)—Two foreign planes which flew over Switzerland today causing alarms in Bern, Zurich and Lucerne, were identified in a general staff communiqué tonight as two German bombers, which apparently lost their way in the fog.

Railroad Shares Continue Strong On Stock Market

Continued strength in railroad shares featured the stock market Thursday and of the total of $58,860 shares changing hands during the day 141,400 represented rail issues. Large blocks were turned over in the final hour, in which much the most active trading of the day took place. Of the 15 most active stocks, all of which showed plus marks for the day, one-third were rail issues, Atchison closing with a gain 1 1/2 points.

The Dow-Jones average of 20 railroad stocks showed the unusual gain of 87 point for the day, closing at 29.65. The industrial average moved ahead 37, to close at 133.39 and utilities gained 13, to 20.21.

With the huge budget proposed by the President, and the understanding that there is more to follow, considerable talk is heard about inflation. The Eccles proposal for monetary reform has drawn fire from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones. Morgenthau talked about "no artificial methods for hardening interest rates," to which one commentator observes that "the present abnormally low interest rates are the most artificial thing in our present monetary system."

Jesse Jones sees no danger of inflation, but there are those who feel that he doesn't want to see any. Warning signs of possible inflation are seen in slowly rising commodity prices, administration efforts to control prices and the large excess reserves held by the banks.

Most commodity markets showed gains Thursday and the Dow-Jones index moved ahead fractionally. Coffee, sugar and wool tops featured the rise. Raw sugars, to arrive within the next few weeks, were taken by refiners and operators at 2.94 and 2.95 cents a pound. General Foods paid 2.98 for 1,000 tons Philippines, February-March shipment. Wheat was 1/2 to 3/4 cent higher. Cotton was steady despite trade selling, closing unchanged to up five points.

The buying move continued in Worth Street with yesterday's volume of print cloths and related goods estimated in excess of 30,000,000 yards. There was a general price increase of 1/2 cent a yard.

Secretary Morgenthau blamed the Federal Reserve proposal for tighter credit controls for the decline in market for U. S. Government obligations. Long-term treasury issues led a broad recovery in bond prices Thursday, following the secretary's statement that there was no other reason for interest rates to harden at this time.

As a result of the Washington and Baltimore conferences regarding prices dealers in leading grades of steel scrap in the New York are cut prices $1 a ton Thursday.

Carloadings for the week ended January 4 totaled 614,171 cars, an increase of 68,864 over the preceding week.

Department store sales on a country-wide basis, in the week ended January 4, were up four per cent from the same period last year. Federal Reserve reports show. Figures varied largely for different sections of the country and while New York showed a loss of 24 per cent, San Francisco had a gain of 24.

Hotel business throughout the country in December was four per cent ahead of a year ago.

Grand Jury Concludes Hearing Brown Evidence
White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—The January grand jury today concluded hearing evidence against Isaac Brown, 41, New York city insurance broker, charged with attempted murder in the first degree.

District Attorney Elbert T. Gallagher told reporters that he could "make no comment" on the case at this time, although the grand jury had disposed of the case.

Brown, now free under $10,000 bail, is accused of slaying the throat of Mathilda Le Boyer, 17, of New York city last December 19, in the rooming house of the William Wilson Junior High School in Mount Vernon.

The girl, confronted by Brown, accused him of a criminal assault at his Broadway office last July when she applied there for a position. She said that in December he told her he was taking her to Mount Vernon for an illegal operation.

Miss Le Boyer was a witness before the grand jury today.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Rice

Impressive Rites Held in St. Peter's Church

Impressive funeral services for Mrs. Sophie Derrenbacher Rice, widow of Senator Jacob Rice, of Wurts street, were held this morning at 10:30 o'clock in St. Peter's Church, of which she had been a lifelong member.

A solemn requiem Mass was offered for the repose of her soul with the Rev. Henry E. Herdgen of St. Peter's Church as celebrant; the Rev. Edmund Burke of St. Joseph's Church as deacon, and the Rev. Martin W. Schwalbenberg of St. Peter's Church as sub-deacon.

Among those seated within the chancel was the Most Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, D.D., Archbishop of New Orleans, La., and a former pastor of St. Peter's Church and a warm personal friend of Mrs. Rice.

Other clergy seated within the chancel during the Mass were the Very Rev. Martin J. Drury, P.R.V.F., of St. Mary's Church and dean of Ulster and Sullivan counties; the Rev. Michael J. Larkin; Monsignor Vincent R. Arcus; St. Joseph's, Sullivan county; the Rev. John Dietrich of Monticello, and the Rev. Joseph Connors of this city.

During the Mass the entire choir of St. Peter's Church sang the responses with William Raible as soloist. Mr. Raible sang at the offertory "Ave Maria" and at the conclusion of the Mass he sang "Ave Verum."

There was a profusion of flowers and spiritual bouquets in the form of Mass cards from the host of friends.

The bearers were Vincent, James, Robert, John, David, and William Rice, grandsons of Mrs. Rice.

Burial was in the family mausoleum in St. Peter's cemetery. Archbishop Rummel, Dean Drury and other members of the clergy accompanied the body to the cemetery where brief ceremonies were held.

The services in the church were largely attended and the funeral cortege to the cemetery was a long one.

Thursday afternoon the Christian Mothers met at the home and recited the Rosary, led by the Rev. Henry E. Herdgen and the Rev. Michael J. Larkin.

Other clergy who visited the home Thursday evening were Archbishop Rummel, Dean Martin J. Drury, the Rev. Henry E. Herdgen and the Rev. Michael J. Larkin.

4 Architects Think $450 Per Pupil Is Enough
Albany, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—Four New York architects view $450 per pupil as a "possible" cost of central district schools.

Albert Wilson, Mamaroneck, asserted at a public hearing of the joint legislative committee on education costs yesterday "school buildings providing adequate educational facilities, but without embellishment, can be constructed for that figure."

James W. Kadeny, Buffalo, State Architect Association president; Charles Ellis, Syracuse, and Duane Lyman, Buffalo, corroborated his testimony.

Dr. William Wilson, associate supervisor of the state division of school buildings and grounds, advised against setting a basic figure covering costs of all district schools in the state.

Yes, the Motor Vehicle Office Has Been Moved
Many Ulster county car owners, apparently, are still unaware of the fact that the Motor Vehicle Bureau office, for years located at 237 Fair street, adjoining the up-town office of The Freeman, has been moved.

The office is now located in the building formerly occupied by the Hardenburgh Furniture Co., adjoining the County Clerk's office, on Main street.

Almost every day one or more persons having business with the Motor Vehicle Bureau come to the old office. Some read the sign on the door and proceed to make their way "around the corner" to the new office. Others read the sign, look through the window into the vacant room and then inquire next door if the Motor Vehicle Bureau office "has moved."

Redeemer Church Held Its Annual Meeting

The Lutheran Church of the Redeemer held its annual congregational meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A survey of the work during the past year was undertaken and it was found that satisfactory progress had been made in all phases of the church's program. Attendance increases were registered for the worship services, for the Sunday school and for the meetings of the several parish organizations. The treasurer announced that all bills were paid and the financial records showed a surplus. In the course of the year a marked gain was noted in benevolence giving—a gain that was especially due to appeals for Finnish relief and for Lutheran World Action.

Among the objectives outlined by the pastor for attainment during the year ahead is a reorganization of the young people's activities so that there shall be groups for various age levels. For the boys and girls in the M. J. M. School an Intermediate Luther League is suggested; for those in the high school, a Senior Luther League; and for those out of school, a Young People's Fellowship. Another objective had to do with the liquidation of the present mortgaged indebtedness by the beginning of 1942 which will be the 45th anniversary year of the church.

The personnel of the official church board for this year is as follows: President, Frederick DuBois; secretary, Walter Riggins; treasurer, Walter Hutt; financial secretary, Alfred Messenger; Thomas Rowland, Charles Spalt, Anton Berulson, Louis Schwartz, Roy Webster, William Mohr, Chester Fox, Montgomery Bailey. ## Bowl Tickets Requested

New Orleans, Jan. 10 (AP)—The cleatprints of Charlie O'Rourke of Boston College are still fresh on the Sugar Bowl Greensward but requests for tickets to the next New Year's Day game—355 days away—already are pouring in. "There are hundreds of them here," said President A. N. Goldberg, of the New Orleans Mid-Winter Sports Association, as he fumbled through a pile of correspondence on his desk. "This fellow wants eight, four behind the other four. Here's one for 400. This one wants the same box he had this year."

Willie Hoppe Stricken

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—Willie Hoppe is still the kind of three cushion billiards, but the 33-year-old master is in no condition today to exult over his cue wizardry. Hoppe had almost completed his conquest of Challengers Jake Schaefer of Cleveland last night when an attack of intestinal influenza laid him low, bringing the title match to an abrupt conclusion. He was removed to his hotel (Palmer House) where a House physician described Hoppe as "a very sick man."

Hunting Claims 28

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—Twenty-eight New York hunters died in pursuit of game last year, compared with 30 in 1939. The state conservation department also reported 159 injured, against 175 the previous year. Of those killed, 13 were deer hunters.

HAND IN HAND

— Retailer and Consumer —

The advent of a New Year is the occasion for the consideration of progress in all things—and of particular interest to ALL CITIZENS is the Progress of THEIR COMMUNITY.

Community Progress comes only through co-operation—and thus the interests of one is indirectly the concern of all. Thus we find the necessity of Retailer and Consumer working "Hand in Hand" for the interests of the community.

LOCAL BUSINESS MEN deserve your Full Support. They pay a share of your governmental expenses through local taxes, they employ you and your friends, they support your community projects—and they bend their efforts to keep selling prices at a level where they will strike a reasonable balance between the producer's cost of production and the consumer's purchasing power. They have in stock the merchandise you want—and if they cannot supply your needs, they will endeavor to obtain your wants for you.

Jones Dairy Cagers Score 37 to 20 Win Over Rowe's

Victory Gives Locals Tie With Simmons' Quintet; Aces Trample Enders; Cadets Win Again

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

Jones Dairy of the City Basketball League continued to lay waste as it rolled over Rowe's Bees Thursday night by the score of 37 to 20. The victory gives the Dairy a tie with Simmons Dairy of Saugerties. Both clubs have won seven and lost one.

Paced by the stellar work of Artie D'Allesandro, the Dairy-men posted a 21-12 lead at the end of the first half and then managed to keep out in front throughout the third and fourth periods. D'Allesandro made the hoop for 4 markers. DeGraff of the Bees scored seven.

The Madden Aces found the scoring easy last night as they trampled over a hapless Dead End club 51 to 27. Ten Brock dumped in 17 points to be the highest individual scorer on the program. The Dead Enders collected seven points in the initial half while the Aces went on a spree and tallied 22.

Cadets Triumph
Mary's Beauty Shoppe scored a 33 to 22 victory over Wimpy's Aces with Albany and Irv Kreppel doing the brunt of the scoring. Albany tallied 14 while his teammate collected 13. Pat Bowers scored 10 for the losers.

The top team in Division B, the Cadets, rolled over an outclassed Moran Business School squad in Wednesday's City League Basketball game by 53 to 18. Snyder, Williams and Hughes, helped to make it a walk-away for the Cadets. Score at half time, Cadets 26, Morans 8.

Three Contests Are Scheduled Tonight In DUSO Circuit

Important Games Are to Be Played in Various League Towns; K.H.S. Against Ellenville

Three DUSO League basketball games will be played this evening as the circuit resumes activities following the extended Christmas layoff.

Following is the complete schedule: Kingston travels to Ellenville. Newburgh plays Monticello and Middletown will be entertained by the Liberty Redskins.

Both leaders of the title to date, Monticello and Middletown, will have their hands full tonight's engagements. Although the Redskins dropped a wild game to Kingston the last time out they figure to have enough strength to give the Middies a fight to the finish. Newburgh may turn the tables on Monticello.

The only teams without any present bearing on the leadership, Kingston and Ellenville will be struggling on the mountain court. If the Maroon and White team drops this encounter they'll drop in the cellar position. Ellenville hasn't tasted victory yet and may still be without one if Kingston's two scoring threats, Rod Sagendorf and Doug Mathers are in a scoring spree.

Following are the standings:

W	L	Pct
Monticello	2	0	1.000
Middletown	2	0	1.000
Newburgh	1	1	.666
Liberty	1	2	.333
Port Jervis	1	2	.333
Kingston	1	2	.333
Ellenville	0	2	.000

friends, numbering around 200

sented by Miss Mary Hale Martin, home economist of Chicago, Ill.
Miss Martin was introduced by Mrs. Raymond E. Craft.

Colorful Glass Gardens Simple and Fun to Make

Even Exotic Plants Will Thrive

Like a brilliant tropical garden
—this miniature "hot house" you can easily make for your own window sill!

Yes, in a glass garden even the most exotic beauties will thrive and you can soon have a riot of them, starting with inexpensive little plants.

After you've put in some pebbles for drainage and added soil, make a tiny pebbly path to wind through little clumps of orangeflowered lantana—and all about plant the white-veined fittonia of Peru. Set a little pottery man on the patch to watch over them!

These, with the graceful brilliant-leaved croton, are ideal companions, all fond of warmth and all liking more moisture in the air than in the soil. Keep the terrarium covered to give them the right humidity.

Or try a lovely dish garden planted with orange, lemon or grapefruit seeds. The foliage is beautiful. Best to cover the dish with cardboard until the seeds come up and be sure to prop up the cardboard with a matchstick to prevent molding.

Or how would you like to grow quaint cacti—or even gardenias—
in a terrarium? Our 32-page booklet tells how. Gives easy directions for all kinds of glass gardens, including bottle and landscaped types; also for dish gardens, kitchen-window herb gardens.

Sent 10c in coin for your copy of GLASS GARDENS AND NOV-ELTY INDOOR GARDENS to Kingston Daily Freeman Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

Inside, a Bone

Principal Learns Depth of Pride in Little Chap

Dallas, Jan. 10 (AP)—He was a skinny, under-nourished little chap but he stood, proudly erect, before his school principal.

"I won't need a free lunch ticket today, thank you."

The principal reached for the sack clutched in the youngster's hand.

"Let's see, Sonny."
Inside was a bone.
Nothing else.

PROPER PAYING OF FORMAL
VISITS, OR PROXY CARD-LEAVING, IS EXPLAINED
IN DETAIL BY EMILY
POST

She Says Ever-Diminishingcustoms of Formality Account for Her Correspondent's
Confusion

Unless we belong in diplomatic or official circles, paying formal visits—which I have described as proxy card-leaving by one member of a family for all the others —is seldom required of us. The ever-diminishing customs of formality undoubtedly account for such confusion as this described by the following reader whose letter is more or less typical:

"Please help me with my correct social bugbear. I can't seem to reason the leaving of visiting cards with a degree of common sense because the rules to me seem too arbitrary for that. As a matter of fact, I use my visiting cards principally for invitation purposes and for enclosing with presents, but infrequently there comes a time when I have to use them for their original purpose.
This week will occur one of those times. I am going to pay a visit on Mrs. Quality, who has a friend staying with her for whom the entertained last week at a big musical, and to which, as practically a stranger, I was invited.
This calls for a visit of courtesy on my part—so I am told. These people have a butler, who will undoubtedly open the door and hold out a card tray. Then (a) do I put one card on the tray, or two?
And (b) do I merely turn on my heels and leave after putting my cards on the tray, or do I ask to be received? And (c) if Mrs.
Quality should come to the door herself, when would I leave these cards?"

The answers are these: (a) If you have no husband, you put two cards of your own on the tray—one intended for Mrs. Quality and one for her visitor. Whether or not there may be a Mr. Quality does not concern you, since "a lady does not leave her own card on a gentleman." But if you have a husband (whether he went with you to the musicale or not), formal procedure requires that you leave a card of his on Mr. Quality, as well as one on Mrs. Quality and on her guest. This makes three of your husband's cards, or three separate engravings of your husband's name.) If your cards read Mr. and Mrs., this counts as one card for him as well as for you, left on Mrs. Quality and her visitor. But since your husband must also call upon the husband of Mrs. Quality, one card of his own, if left on Mr. Quality—and this same card is quite enough to do for every man, even including a Mr. Guest! This makes three cards on which your husband's name appears! And this in the present day would be the outside limit that any reasoning human being should leave.

(b) You ask, "Is Mrs. Quality at home?" The butler either answers, "Yes, madam," or else announces "Not at home." In either case, you now put your cards on the tray, and either enter the house, or turn and leave without saying anything further.

(c) This would end the formality. You'd hand her your cards and probably ask, "Are you at home?" which simply means, it convenient to see me? At that point she can, if she must, say,
"Oh, I'm so sorry, I have an engagement—won't you please come some other day soon!" Otherwise, she says, "Of course I am—do come in!" or other greeting. You should not stay longer than 15 or 20 minutes—unless especially urged to do so.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters.
She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers.
Today's slip is "Visiting Cards and When to Leave Them." Be sure to send a three-cent, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times

Decision Given In Property Case

Action to Set Aside Deed Brought by Plaintiff

Judge Aaron V. S. Cochrane, official referee, Hudson, has rendered his decision in an action commenced by Elias K. Van Vliet and Esther Van Vliet against John Delloy, Katherine Rusch, Lotta J. Burkhardt, Henry Burkhardt and Josephine Burkhardt, to set aside a deed to property located in the town of Rochester.

The plaintiffs claim that the deed was procured by John Delloy and Lotta Burkhardt and Katherine Rusch because of certain fraudulent representations as to a mortgage covering property in New York city and which was assigned to the plaintiffs as part of the purchase price. This mortgage, it was claimed, was of no value and that this fact was known by the defendants. Subsequently, the property was purchased by the defendants, Henry Burkhardt and Josephine Burkhardt, who expended a considerable amount of money in improving the same. The plaintiffs claim that these people had acquired the property with knowledge of fraud.

In the action, tried before Judge Cochrane as official referee, plaintiffs were represented by Flanagan & Kaercher, and the defendants by Cashin & Ewig. In dismissing the plaintiffs' complaint, the official referee in his opinion wrote:

"The circumstances of this case are unusual and on their face excite suspicion. Fraud, however, has not been established. There is no evidence of any false statement of fact. Delloy said that the first mortgage was being paid off and that the interest on the second mortgage was being paid in advance. These statements, if false, were fraudulent but they may have been true and there is no evidence that they were untrue. Statements as to the value of the New York property and as to the sufficiency of the second mortgage as an investment were not statements of fact but expressions of opinion merely, which, under the authorities, are not actionable. The mistake of plaintiffs was in attempting to realize $3,000 on a second mortgage for that amount offered them in place of the $2,000 in cash for which they had contracted to sell their property. The risk was perfectly obvious, but plaintiffs took the risk and their poor judgment in doing so cannot, in the absence of any false statement of fact, become the basis of an action of fraud."

"Other difficulties in the way of a recovery it is unnecessary to consider in view of the foregoing discussion."

The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. There will be a guest speaker and entertainment. The Ladies' Auxiliary is planning a package party for Sunday, January 19.

New England Gets Snow for Skiers

Conditions for Week-End Are Favorable

Boston, Jan. 10 (AP)—New England's ski hills wore a welcome, powdery snow blanket today, and with another light fall predicted, conditions for the week-end should be the best of the season.

Not one "poor" report was received from the north country and practically all slopes and trails had three to 16 inches of powder over solid or frozen bases.

Advanced entries indicated a large field in the sanctioned cross country and giant slalom on Cannon Mountain tomorrow and Sunday under the sponsorship of the Franconia Ski Club.

Other week-end events included the annual four-event meet between the Lebanon Outing Club and Dartmouth's "B" team, the get-together of Colby College girls and Dartmouth boys for informal partner races; open downhill for men and women at Ossipee; a sled dog race with 20 teams at Wolfeboro, and the seventh annual snowshoe festival of Le Club Joliette Racquetteur at Berlin.

The board's agenda will include recommendations from the execu-

"I needed $130"

"I NEEDED $130 pronto, but was afraid that a chauffeur like myself might not be able to get a loan for that much—or that the payments would be too big for me to handle."

"However I got to talking with one of the fellows at the garage who had a loan at The Personal Finance Company. He told me 'I probably could get the cash OK and that between eight and nine dollars a month would be all I'd have to repay on $130.'"

"I stopped in a nearby Personal office that afternoon and got the loan without any trouble."

Mayor Conference Hits Differentials In State Program

also was opposed. The amendment has won approval of one legislature and must pass another before submission to the people.

The conference said its adoption would leave "no funds with which to pay for grade crossing eliminations on the state program for 1940 and 1941 and those meritorious projects not yet considered."

The conference sought approval of bills to increase the share of cities and villages in gasoline and motor vehicle tax revenue. Co-ordinate police forces as requested by Lehman, extend civil service to villages, and provide uniform financial procedure for all local government units.
